

The fact that Sinclair Broadcasting can force their stations to carry an anti-Kerry documentary right before the election shows, first, how dangerous it is to have media control in only a few companies and, secondly, that many of the major media companies are so tied in with the present administration that they will violate ethics to serve up propaganda. We are sliding down a slippery slope.

Does it matter that Sinclair uses the public airwaves and is supposed to be in the public interest? Apparently not. Many of our legislators and administration officials are either ignorant of the dangers or willing (eager?) to go along. There is no supervision, regulation, or safeguards. Where are you, FCC, and why don't you do your job? Are you so beholden to the political and corporate cabal that you will overlook everything to keep your positions? What happened to honor?

The Free Press in America will die when it becomes a house organ of corporations indifferent to the needs of local communities. When the party line is put out as news, we have to worry and realize that the USA, as conceived, is on the endangered list.
